Rahab is one of a few people in the lineage of Jesus that wasn't Jewish—she was a Canaanite. Not to mention, she was a prostitute. But neither of those things kept her from being used by God in an incredible way.

Discussion Questions:

1. If you had a nickname associated with a sin or character flaw, what might it be? The worrier? The angry? The fearful? The addict?
 2. Have you ever felt labeled or defined by your past? How did it affect your relationship with God or others?
 3. Does your past ever cause you to doubt your inclusion in the kingdom of God? If so, why? If not, why not?
 4. Does another person's past ever cause you to doubt their ability to participate in the kingdom of God?
 5. In your own words, what does Rahab's story teach us about God's ability to use anyone, regardless of their past?
 6. What does it look like to actively extend grace to someone with a "messy" or difficult past? How can Rahab's story inspire us to do that?
